Understanding Loss Risks in Assisted Living During Transitions in Care

Description

Tuesday, August 22, 2023 | 1:00 PM ET

As the population across the country ages, assisted living is becoming the community of choice for aging in place. Resident care litigation has been emerging with more frequency as the mission and vision of assisted living communities evolve. Person-centered care is a central philosophical aim of the assisted living movement. As in nursing homes, accidents or clinical problems at assisted living centers can translate into liabilities. Many of the losses that drive claims occur during transitions in care from the home to the hospital to the assisted living/memory care and to skilled nursing.

Rebecca Adelman
Founder, Adelman Law Firm
and Claims Management

Rebecca Adelman is a lawyer, entrepreneur, influencer, and thought leader in healthcare, senior living, and risk management. In 2001, after paving the way for young women lawyers in Memphis, Tennessee, at traditional law firms, she founded Adelman Law Firm and Claims Management. The all-women firm is a member of the Women's Business Enterprise National Council and Tennessee Certified Women's Business Enterprise. For over 30 years, Rebecca has concentrated her practice in healthcare, insurance defense, employment, and business litigation. She is also an arbitrator for the American Health Lawyers Association. In 2021, she founded Guide Path, LLC, an Expectations and Risk Management Certification Program to mitigate risk and improve quality of care and regulatory compliance. Guide Path, the new standard of excellence for senior living certification, delivers a paradigm shift in the way senior living care providers understand, establish, and manage resident and family expectations in assisted living and skilled nursing communities along the continuum of care.
