Proactive Risk Management and Transitions in Care: An Ounce of Prevention

Description

The evolution of healthcare is driving a reassessment of how healthcare providers view and manage risk while providing quality care and a safe working environment. Direct care professional shortages, increased regulatory scrutiny, and the changing needs of patients and families, especially in senior living, create new risks and opportunities for transformational, sustained changes. Assessing organizational risk management and setting annual goals for implementing quality and process improvements, regulatory compliance, and culture changes are the keys to reducing risk during transitions in care. This session will address proactive strategies for risk mitigation, based on the top 10 areas of risk during transitions in care, to enhance and transform our senior living culture.

Learning Objectives

- 1 Understand the proactive strategies for risk mitigation based on the top 10 loss risks during transitions in care
- 2 Identify the impact and opportunity that proactive risk management has on the enterprise
- 3 Implement enterprise plans, incorporating risk mitigation strategies into the community and Claims Management

Rebecca Adelman is a lawyer, entrepreneur, influencer, and thought leader in healthcare, senior living, and risk management. In 2001, after paving the way for young women lawyers in Memphis, Tennessee, at traditional law firms, she founded Adelman Law Firm and Claims Management. The all-women firm is a member of the Women's Business Enterprise National Council and Tennessee Certified Women's Business Enterprise. For over 30 years, Rebecca has concentrated her practice in healthcare, insurance defense, employment, and business litigation. She is also an arbitrator for the American Health Lawyers Association. In 2021, she founded Guide Path, LLC, an Expectations and Risk Management Certification Program to mitigate risk and improve quality of care and regulatory compliance. Guide Path, the new standard of excellence for senior living certification, delivers a paradigm shift in the way senior living care providers understand, establish, and manage resident and family expectations in assisted living and skilled nursing communities along the continuum of care.
